The tax law firm ADVISIUS (Brussels) continues to expand, with the arrival Frédéric LETTANY.

For more than 25 years Frédéric has developed his tax practice (procedure and advice) within leading firms (Loyens & Loeff, Monard Law).

He primarily works in the area of fiscal procedure for companies, individuals and public authorities. In addition, he has extensive expertise in Financial and Economic Criminal Law and advises corporations and private individuals.

Frédéric is quoted in various Legal directories (Legal 500, Leaders League) both in the field of tax practice and that of white-collar crime.

Frédéric Lettany holds a Law degree (UCLouvain), a Fiscal Law degree (Catholic University of Leuven) and a Common Law diploma from the University of Moncton, Canada. Frédéric has been admitted to the Brussels Bar in 1994.

Commenting on the arrival, Laurent Donnay de Casteau, founding partner of the firm, who has worked with him in the past, said:

" We are very pleased that Frederic decided to join our team of tax experts. Our recently formed law firm gains additional abilities in tax procedure with him. There is a clear increase of tax litigation due to the cash hunt by the tax authorities making unfortunately any other outcome almost impossible. With his sharp experience, Frédéric will excel in the assistance granted to clients. Together with the arrival of Jean Meeùs, and more recently with junior associate Adrien Dahms, our firm demonstrates its ambitions for the future."
